This disclosure summarizes the principal risks of using Pip2Dollar. It is not exhaustive. If you do not understand a risk, seek independent advice before enrolling.

1. You can lose money — potentially all of it

Trading contracts for difference (CFDs) on gold is high risk. Prices move quickly and can move against you. You may lose the entire amount you allocate to the Strategy. Only allocate money you can afford to lose.

2. Leverage magnifies outcomes

CFDs are leveraged. Small market moves can produce large gains or losses relative to your allocated capital. Leverage works in both directions.

3. Past performance is not a promise

Any performance figures we publish are dated snapshots of a public track record and do not guarantee future results. Markets change; a strategy that performed well can lose money in future periods.

4. Your results can differ from the published record

Even though the Strategy runs on your own account, your outcomes can differ from the published master record because of spreads, slippage, latency, execution timing, your account type and settings, your equity level, and when you enrolled.

5. Automated execution carries operational risk

The Strategy is automated and depends on broker availability, connectivity, cloud infrastructure, and third-party services. Interruptions, delays, or errors can affect execution. Protective mechanisms (risk caps, equity stops, kill switches) reduce but do not eliminate this risk, and may themselves pause trading.

6. You keep custody — and responsibility

Your funds remain in your own Exness account; we cannot withdraw them. This protects you, but it also means you are responsible for your account, your deposits and withdrawals, and keeping your credentials secure. Deposits and withdrawals you make while enrolled affect position sizing and fees.

7. Fees affect your net result

A performance fee of 20% applies to new profit above your account's high-water mark. Fees reduce your net returns. No fee is charged when there is no new profit above the high-water mark.

8. Regulatory and counterparty considerations

Exness is an independent, offshore-regulated broker and is your counterparty for trading; Pip2Dollar is independent of Exness. The availability and terms of the service may be affected by changes at the broker or by regulation in your jurisdiction.

9. No advice

Pip2Dollar provides a technology and execution service. Nothing we provide is investment, legal, or tax advice or a personal recommendation. Decisions to enroll and how much to allocate are yours.

By enrolling you confirm that you have read and understood these risks and that you are willing and able to bear them. Trading CFDs on gold carries a high risk of loss. Pip2Dollar is independent and is not operated or endorsed by Exness or MetaQuotes.
